
O&O Software joins the Initiative Cloud Services Made in Germany

Berlin, May 21, 2014 – O&O Software stands for everything products in Germany have been known for and guarantees quality, maximum security and satisfaction with the solutions we offer. All O&O Software GmbH products are developed in Berlin, Germany.

The Initiative Cloud Services Made in Germany represents Germany-based cloud computing providers. The entry criteria to join this initiative were the same as the standards that O&O observes in its products since the company's foundation: They include, among others, a Berlin-based German support free of charge and contracts under German law. O&O even goes further in terms of data protection of its customers, since it exclusively works with data centers that store the data only in Germany.

IT Management in the German cloud

O&O has successfully been active in the development of Microsoft Windows Tools since 1997, and has developed a cloud monitoring tool for Windows PCs and servers with O&O Syspectr. O&O Syspectr monitors PCs and servers, and reports potential problems to the user before they can cause damage. "O&O Syspectr is the next logical evolutionary step in our development of both our desktop and network products," according to Olaf Kehrer, co-founder and CEO of O&O Software GmbH. O&O Syspectr, like all O&O products, was completely developed by O&O Software in Berlin, Germany, and is serviced in German data centers. The free version allows for the use of up to ten desktop PCs. About the Initiative Cloud Services Made in Germany

The Initiative Cloud Services Made in Germany was launched by AppSphere AG in 2010 to join Germany-based providers offering a wide variety of cloud computing services such as Infrastructure-as-a-Service (IaaS), Platform-as-a-service (PaaS), and Software-as-a-Service (SaaS). The goal is to ensure greater legal certainty by using current legal standards applicable in Germany as the basis for the contract concluded with the customer.
